Manual focus Vivitar lenses will be available in FD mount, while autofocus lenses will use the EF mount. There are adapters to use FD mount lenses on EOS cameras, but since the flange-focal distance on the EF/EOS mount is longer than on the FD mount, the lenses will not focus to infinity, unless the adapter contains a lens element.

The camera seems unaware a lens is even present so pictures could only be taken in manual exposure and manual focusing mode, and with the lens aperture fully open. To improve matters some black anodising can be scraped off the body end of the extension tubes to allow a certain electrical contact with the camera.
